Interweave Premieres Studios Magazine Fall/Winter 2008, a special issue of Cloth Paper Scissors

Magazine features dream studios, studio makeovers, and ideas for creative organization to make the most of your space

Loveland, Colo., October 7, 2008: Interweave, one of the country's leading arts and craft-enthusiast media companies, announced today the publication of the second issue of Studios, a special-interest publication, on newsstands for $7.99 this fall/winter 2008. This 100-page special issue of Cloth Paper Scissors magazine takes an inside look at studios both large and small, exploring a range of artists—from quilters, painters, mixed-media artists, sewists, beaders and more—and how they customize work spaces to meet their needs. "Studios features creative spaces that are big, small, and in-between," says Editor Cate Coulacos Prato. "No matter what your interest and regardless of your physical circumstances, you can create a studio, maybe even the studio of your dreams."

Studios offers eight in-depth profiles and 21 vignettes of artist and crafters' studios from around the country, featuring a plethora of ideas for organization, creative flow, storage, and arrangement. The issue includes more than 85 different tips for sorting, storing, and organizing the crafter's stash; ideas for how to create a studio when you don't have a designated studio area; two studio makeovers with complete before-and-afters; plus 3 creative how-to projects with instructions for making dressed up dividers, a studio collage, and an altered suitcase table.
